

THE BRITISH MUSEUM

July 25, 2010

The British Museum, founded in 1753, is dedicated to the history of the world's different cultures. The collection includes a large and impressive section devoted to ancient Egypt, and it is here where you will find the famous Rosetta Stone, treasures from Tutankhamun's tomb, a piece of the Sphinx's nose, impressive Egyptian sculptures, and real mummies (which never cease to impress my kids!). We also love the Medieval Europe gallery and the section for Ancient Greece and Rome. The museum is absolutely stunning and certainly worth a visit. It's also (rather surprisingly) very geared for families with a Children's Multimedia guide, free activity backpacks and designated family trails. There's also the Ford Centre for young visitors on the lower floor which has feeding and changing rooms for babies.

Check out the Family Visits section of the website, which lists all the different activities available for children, as well as the Young Explorers page which has online games and other interactive and educational activities.

CONTACT DETAILS:

British Museum

Great Russell Street
London WC1B 3DG, United Kingdom
Phone: 020 7323 8000
Open daily from 10:00-17:30

(Image from Flickr)

Category: Central London, See, Where

COURTNEY | NO COMMENTS
