

MAKE MEANING - ART SPACE FOR KIDS, YOUNG AND OLD

November 4, 2010

Paint-a-pot... step aside. I think your days are numbered. Make Meaning recently opened its doors on the Upper West Side and they are definitely on to something! The gigantic, walk-in creativity center offers a place where parents and their kids can sit together and work side by side on a variety of creative projects - all age appropriate and stuff that you will actually use!

The space currently offers six experiences: soap crafting, candle-making, ceramics, glass, jewelry and paper and they are open to 11pm on some nights! Not only is it a perfect retreat when it's too cold or crummy to be outside but what mother doesn't need some downtime to just zone out and create something for themselves once in a while?

I love the look of the Soapsphere! Kids can choose the color and fragrance of their soap and then throw in a toy surprise for bath-time fun! And they serve cupcakes!

Category: Play, Upper West Side

DINA | NO COMMENTS
